The Right To The City

The right to the city is an idea and a slogan that was first proposed by Henri Lefebvre in his 1968 book Le Droit à la ville and that has been reclaimed more recently by social movements, thinkers and several progressive local authorities alike as a call to action to reclaim the city as a co-created space—a place for life detached from the growing effects that commodification and capitalism have had over social interaction and the rise of spatial inequalities in worldwide ...

Right to the city - Wikipedia values we hold. The right to the city is, therefore, far more than a right of individual access to the resources that the city embodies: it is a right to change ourselves by changing the city more after our heart's desire. It is, moreover, a collective rather than an individual right since changing the city inevitably depends upon the exercise of a collective power over the processes of urbanization. The freedom to make and remake

1 THE RIGHT TO THE CITY David Harvey

The Right to the City is defined by David Harvey as: "far more than the individual liberty to access urban resources: it is a right to change ourselves by changing the city. It is, moreover, a common rather than an individual right since this transformation inevitably depends upon the exercise of a collective power to reshape the processes of urbanization.

Right to the City | What is the Right to the City

The right to the city manifests itself as a superior form of rights: right to freedom, to individualization in socialization, to habitat and to inhabit. The right to the oeuvre, to participation and appropriation (clearly distinct from the right to property), are implied in the right to the city.

The Right to the City | The Anarchist Library

The real dimension is a concrete claim to integrated social, political and economic rights, the right to education, work, health, leisure and accommodation in an urban context that contributes to developing people and space rather than destroying or exploiting people and space. _ the right to the city is 'like a cry and a demand' and 'can only be formulated as a transformed and renewed right to urban life' (Lefebvre, 1996, p. 158, emphasis in original)."(Aalbers & Gibb, 2014)

The Right to the City | Spatial Justice

The right to the city is far more than the individual liberty to access urban resources: it is a right to change ourselves by changing the city.
