The Unitary Eu Patent System

A better patent system for Europe The Unitary Patent and the Unified Patent Court are the building blocks which will supplement and strengthen the existing centralised European patent granting system. They will offer users of the patent system a cost-effective option for patent protection and dispute settlement across Europe.

EPO - Unitary Patent & Unified Patent Court

The European patent with unitary effect, more commonly known as the unitary patent, is a new type of European patent in advanced stage of adoption which would be valid in participating member states of the European Union. Unitary effect can be registered for a European patent upon grant, replacing validation of the European patent in the individual countries concerned. The unitary effect means ...

The Unitary Patent system is inextricably linked to the creation of the Unified Patent Court, which will have jurisdiction over Unitary Patents and "classic" European patents. The EU regulations establishing the Unitary Patent system (No 1257/2012 and No 1260/2012) entered into force on 20 January 2013, but they will only apply as from the date ...

EPO - When will Unitary Patents be available?

The principal aims of the Unitary Patent system are to provide a single European patent and a new court system capable of issuing decisions that are effective across the whole of the European Union, to address the perception that the current system is expensive and fragmented. At present, there are two routes to obtaining patents in Europe.

The European unitary patent system — Financier Worldwide

Under the current system, once a European patent is granted, the patent owner normally validates it in only a small number of EU countries. By contrast, with a new unitary patent, innovators will have "the potential in time to cover 26 of the 27 EU member states for a similar cost," Latham explained.

New EU unitary patent system could speed vehicle innovations

The first European patents with unitary effect can be applied for from this date onwards. The European Patent Office (EPO) will examine and grant the unitary patent as a standard European Patent (EP). But after it is granted, patentees can request unitary effect for the territory of the participating EU states.
